S. H. GOLDSTEIN KILLED

WELL-KNOWN CITIZEN OF GLENDALE MEETS DEATH IN A RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

By an unfortunate accident, which occurred Saturday afternoon, not far from Bakersfield, Cal., S. H. Goldstein, representative of the J. R. Watkins Medical company, in Southern California, met his death. Mr. Goldstein had gone north on his usual business tour of the district between Mojave and Bakersfield. Mrs. Goldstein received a letter from him on Saturday morning stating that he had been invited to a friend's house in Bakersfield, where a party was to be given in his honor. It was while on his way to Bakersfield that the accident occurred.

F. E. Nimmer, a Los Angeles salesman with whom he was acquainted, offered to take Goldstein to Bakersfield in his auto and while on the journey and not far from Bakersfield, a runaway horse dashed into the auto in which the two men were seated. The shaft of the buggy to which the horse was attached struck Goldstein on the head, fracturing his skull and killing him almost instantly. He died while on the way to the hospital.

Mr. Goldstein was a Jew. He was also an orthodox Jew and devotedly attached to his religion and people. He was the organizer of the recent movement in Glendale for tthe relief of the oppressed and starving Jews in Europe and his kindly heart was deeply enlisted in that cause. The success of the movement in Glendale was a great source of satisfaction to him.

Mr. Goldstein was born in Australia. He was thirty-four years of age. He came to this country about 10 years ago and had resided in California all of that time. He resided at 717 W. Fifth street and was married. Mrs. Goldstein's people reside in San Francisco and the body will be taken direct to that city from Bakersfield for interment in the family lot.

Mr. Goldstein's death will be greatly regretted not only by his coreligionists both here and in Los Angeles, where he was widely known in Jewish circles, but also among the wide circle of his friends in Glendale, who loved him for his wide charity and his kindly humanity.

Up to Monday morning only meager details of the accident had reached this city.

CLENDENINS ENTERTAIN

When Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Clendenin entertained a number of friends with a dinner party, Friday evening, the spirit of Easter was everywhere. The living room and den of their beautiful home at 246 Orange street were abloom with the dark beauty of Lady Battersea roses while in the dining room the long table, perfect in its appointments, was enhanced by magnificent Enchantress carnations, the pretty place cards, and the bird favors perched on the nut cups adding to the effect. The affair complimented Mr. G. Zeeman, an influential eastern banker residing at Estherville, Iowa, and Mrs. Zeeman, who are touring California.

Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Daniel McPeak of Los Angeles, Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Edmonds, Rev. and Mrs. F. A. Field and Miss Field, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. John W. McCurdy, the guests of honor and the host and hostess, all of whom enjoyed the bountiful four-course dinner so daintily served. Wit and repartee made the moments fly and it was with reluctance that the guests separated, having greatly enjoyed the hospitality of their host and hostess and having found new friends in Mr. and Mrs. Zeeman.

MEETING FOR ARMENIAN RELIEF

Dr. and Mrs. Tracy and Miss Tracy, who have recently returned from Turkey, where Dr. Tracy has been for 47 years a missionary, gave a most interesting account of mission work among the Armenians, at the home of Mrs. W. F. Porter, 823 N. Brand boulevard, Saturday afternoon. The spacious lawn was filled with guests who listened with much pleasure to the stories of the missionaries, who spoke from the front veranda of the house. Those present contributed liberally, at the close of the demonstration, to the fund for the relief of the Armenian sufferers. Miss Tracy assisted her parents in their explanations of life in Turkey. She appeared in different costumes illustrating the peasant and upper class life of Turkish and Armenian women.

Will pay 10c for a copy of the Evening News of March 20.

ASPECTS OF WAR TIME

MRS. DAVID EDSTROM TELLS OF SOME EFFECTS OF GREAT CONTEST IN EUROPE

Fresh from the battlefields of Europe, Mrs. David Edstrom, wife of the famous Swedish sculptor of that name and herself an artist of no mean attainment, has a great many things of interest to narrate. At present she is the guest of Mrs. C. E. Anderson, 201 N. Louise street, whose sister she is. Mrs. Edstrom says that the war will undoubtedly have different effects on the nations.

"England," said Mrs. Edstrom, was in a very pitiable condition just before the war. The nation had had a great deal of its native valor and vitality sapped out of it by vain preachers of peace and by those who professed to believe that Germany had no sinister intentions. The labor policy of Lloyd George and others had devitalized the people and led them to think that a millennium was to come very shortly.

"The war has changed all that. The people have wakened up to see that their trusted leaders had misled them and that they had lost perspective on the world and its advances. They had become besotted in commercialism and looked to a life of lazy indifference as the highest ideal. Out of the war has come a vitality and vitalizing that are wonderful. Boys and youths go to the front and come back men, sobered, steadied, reliable and with a wonderful outlook on the world and on themselves. The world is going to hear from these men in the days to come.

"I did a great deal of work among the Belgians and came to realize the dreadful tragedy that has befallen that valiant nation. Yet I believe that the hand of God is over it all and that out of it all Europe will come a chastened and saddened, but a wiser and better land.

"In England I saw hundreds of men blinded in the war, who were learning trades by which to support themselves. The blind were being taught by blind instructors. Great Britain is beginning to understand that she must gain that perfection of mechanical and technical skill which has sent Germany so far ahead in the past forty years. I believe that if Germany's ideals had been peaceful ideals she might easily have realized her ambition to lead the world in a far better way than by the force of arms. As it is she has roused the other nations and added tenfold force to their competition. Britain and other nations will learn to give that technical skill for which Germany's workers are noted to her own workmen and Germany's bedrilled automata will learn something of the individual freedom of mind and action which are so characteristic of the Briton. They will learn to act on their own initiative.

"There are naturally lighter aspects of the war. For instance I attended a little church in Wales some time ago. The clergyman, preaching on the Prodigal son, made a tender though curiously pitiful appeal for forgiveness of the Germans as a Christian duty. Curiously enough too he reproduced that characteristic English "bull" about the prodigal, saying that the father brought forth the fatted calf, 'that he had been keeping for years and years in anticipation of the prodigal's return.'

"In the middle of the Zeppelin raids, when all London was nightly swathed in darkness, a writer in the Daily Mail made a characteristically English appeal to the effect that as it was so dark on the streets the policeman, who, as everyone knows, carry a lighted lantern at the belts in front, "should also be lighted from the rear.' The humor of this seemed to escape the average Englishman, as it evoked a long and serious discussion of the subject."

AUTO ACCIDENT VICTIMS

There has been no change in the condition of Dorothy Bonnell, victim of the auto accident that took place March 29. She is still unconscious, but appears a little stronger physically. Mrs. Coral Harrison Sloan, who had three ribs broken in the same accident, is improving rapidly. She is still weak and unable to move, but yesterday was able to enjoy the sunshine on a bed on the Sanitarium veranda. It is hoped she will be able to be removed to her own home about a week from now.

CURRENT TOPICS

THE FRESHMEN—RUSSIAN MUSIC—DAUGHTERS OF THE REVOLUTION

A WORD ABOUT THE FRESHMEN

Owing to an oversight, the names of the committee of the Freshman class who were responsible for the success of the booth contest at the High School auditorium Friday evening, were omitted from the article headed "Contest in Oratory" in the "News" of April 8.

This is the first time in the history of the school that the Freshman class has won and we feel that these young people who, handicapped by youth and inexperience, worked together so harmoniously and enthusiastically should receive the credit due them.

The committee consisted of: Electricity—John Burder and Chester Weaver; Yells—Floyd Stokes and Fred Dodge; Tickets and Publicity—Harold Russell, Lucile Nicholas, Frank Balthis, Arville Williams, Sam McKee, Edw. Newcomb and Wm. Taylor; Costumes and Decorations—Eloise Seaman, Leila Shea, Cecilia Lyon, Jean Anderson, Mildred McKee and Chauncey Kolts.

The decision of the judges was unanimous. Through the efforts of Dr. Jessie Russell and the kindness of the William's Dry Goods Co., Bosserman Hardware Co., City Lighting Dept., which loaned the light streamers, the Newton Electric Co., and the Bentley-Schoeneman Lumber Co., expense was reduced to a minimum.

Special credit should be given to Harold Russell and his committee for the business-like way in which they handled their accounts and for turning out the largest representation that has ever been turned out at one of these occasions. Also to Cecilia Lyon, who originated the idea of the clothesline with the little scrub-brushes and pails suspended from it; also the tub with the huge electrically lighted "19" upon it, which formed the decoration of the central pole.

Acknowledgement should also be given to John Bender, in charge of electrical effects, Floyd Stokes and Fred Dodge for original yells, Eloise Seaman for costumes and Winifred Jones for leading the song. Too much credit cannot be given to Fred Dodge, who is also the school yell leader, for the manner in which, with the able assistance of Floyd Stokes, he marshalled his forces to victory. The co-operation of the class was splendid and the precision with which they marched in and took their seats and gave their yells and songs was a great factor in the decision of the judges and a splendid argument in favor of preparedness.

GLENDALE, CALIFORNIA, MONDAY, APRIL 10, 1916

SPIRIT OF THE MODERN SCHOOL

No one could have sat in the High School, Friday night last, without feeling that there has been a vast rise in the standard of school life during the past decade; that the relations of students and teachers in the High School are of the most kindly and respectful nature and that in the whole student body of the High School Glendale has a little army of citizens who are being well trained for future service. It was manifest from the outset of the oratorical contest that the orations were of a very high order.

Naturally orations of this character, which are first written, then committed to memory, are lacking in that spontaneity that is the attractive and convincing quality of extemporaneous speech. At the same time they have a finish and a perfection of dction that is too often lacking in three-fourths, one might almost say nine-tenths, of the extemporaneous speeches that are common on public occasions.

In everything at the oratorical contest there was a spontaneity and freshness that was a strong evidence of the free American spirit that characterizes the school. The four classes were rivals in their booths, it is true, but they were generous rivals and their yell leaders magnanimously led them in cheers for the other classes, the other classes responding. The young people showed great originality in the costuming of their classes and if the Scrubs won the booth prize on the score of originality there were not wanting many Scrubs who were astonished that the Juniors did not win with their gorgeous and tasteful oriental display.

In the oratory was manifest the growing spirit of young America that is not content to live in the past and has developed an analytical and critical mind that is one of these days to drive to the backwoods the whole brigade of ancient office seekers and "Little Americans" who would give up the Philippines, disband the army, let the navy rot in the docks, and wait until some outside nation threw a rope round the nation's neck and set it to work for the outsider.

That the young people are thinking for themselves was manifest in the carefully reasoned and progressive oration of the young lady who spoke on "Vocational Education," and who advocated the training of the future citizen to be an independent and self-supporting entity in the nation. Nothing could have been finer than the story of the work of the United States in the Philippines and the cruelty, folly and sin of proposing to abandon the islands.

Seldom is a better speech heard anywhere than the well-balanced and manly oration in which was advocated the doctrine of national "Preparedness." There was a manly ring in every word of that effort that found an echo in the heart of every true American present. The young lad, little more than a boy, who spoke on the Boy Scouts' Movement" showed an appreciation of all that goes to make up a decent, clean American youth, that was extremely gratifying and refreshing.

Such an occasion as that of Oratory evening at the High School goes far to show that the heart of the nation is as true, loyal and courageous as it has ever been and sounds in advance the death knell of that spirit which would persuade Americans that they should neglect the means of preserving their national honor and their national freedom.

FINANCES OF GREAT BRITAIN

As frequently as reference is made to the enormous burdens that European nations are piling up for themselves on account of the present war as frequently is it also that pointed out that in the case of Great Britain, which is bearing the heaviest financial burden of all and at the same time financing her allies the annual income is also increasing. In fact, Britain is more prosperous now that at any time previous to the present war.

Sir George Paish, one of the great financial authorities of the world, states that Britain's annual income has increased by three billion dollars ($3,000,000,000) since the war began. This statement was made before the Royal Statistical Society. The nation has almost succeeded in maintaining its productive power despite the withdrawal of approximately 4,000,000 men from its industries. Such an achievement is something of which any nation might easily be proud but the task of accomplishing which might also make any nation despair.

If allowance were to be made for the increase in the nation's gold stocks, said the great authority in his address before the society, it would be found that Britain had succeeded in meeting virtually the whole of its war expenses out of its income, without needing to draw on its accumulative capital to any extent worth mentioning. Taxation during the coming year is estimated to amount to $2,250,000,000.

On the whole the burden of taxation is light considering the circumstances and considering the burden the country was forced to bear during the Napoleonic wars. The national debt of Britain was $3,535,000,000 before the war. It will be $12,250,000,000 by the first of May and should the war continue another year it will amount to $20,000,000,000.

That seems an enormous sum—twenty billion dollars—but it is really not any more in proportion to the income and resources of Britain than was the debt incurred by that country during the Napoleonic fighting at the beginning of the nineteenth century. It seems that the things which are expected to "stagger humanity" humanity manages to face and to overcome very bravely. With all its evils the war will leave a regerenated Europe and a better Europe and finally a more prosperous Europe than there has ever been.

Every day the effects of the war in Europe spread to some new industry—the latest is matches. The war is using up the chemicals and the consequence is that matches that formerly were sold for six boxes for a nickel are now seven cents. In Britain that rise in price is to be added to by a war tax. There was perhaps never a more unpopular tax than that on matches. Long ago when Robert Lowe, chancellor of the exchequer in Britain, tried to impose a tax on that household necessity he provoked so great an outroar in the country that the obnoxious tax had to be dropped. Now it has been revived and the people are submitting to it without a murmur. It is probable that the United States will see a further rise in the price of matches. By and by the paper on which newspapers are printed is likely to be of a yellow tone. The blue dye that is used to give them a white appearance is almost unobtainable. Good linen thread, which used to come from Belgium, is now at a discount and the United States does not manufacture it. Other articles are certain to be placed on the wanting list before long.

It should interest Glendale chicken ranchers to learn that the New York State Department of Foods and Markets, backed by the evidence of the United States Department of Agriculture, is preparing to attack the system of shipping live poultry delivered here, on the theory that the New York public annually buys 28,000,000 pounds of sand, gravel, meal and water, for which it pays $7,000,000, to say nothing of the danger to health from diseased fowls. It should be worth the while of the intelligent local chicken breeders to combat this statement, at least as far as Glendale is concerned. There are some excellent chicken ranches here but the majority of them sell chicks for raising and fine stock for breeding purposes. The marketing of fowls for the tables of the easterners is a business that only concerns a few. The east, however, seems to be aroused on this question and the purchasers of live fowls from western and middle States assert that they are continually cheated by the shipping of diseased fowls and of fowls stuffed to the limit with food, that they may weigh more than their natural weight when they arrive at the eastern market.

Up to the very last moment of her life she was active and able to go about. Her death came very suddenly, while she was in the midst of household duties.

Mrs. Reed, whose maiden name was Kermelia E. Bliss, was married in 1884 to Mr. C. O. Reed, at Richmond, Pa. A year ago Mr. and Mrs. Reed celebrated their golden wedding at the home of their son, Mr. C. E. Reed, 139 S. Brand. I have not been and am not now in collusion with any man or body of men, and if I am fortunate enough to be elected as City Trustee of Glendale I shall go in office with my hands absolutely free and untied, without prejudice or biased. REVIVE OLD MEMORIES

Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Boyer celebrated the third anniversary of their marriage, Saturday, April 8, by motoring to Santa Barbara for the week end. They had with them as guests Mr. and Mrs. A. L. The trip is a particularly beautiful one, especially at this time of the year, the fine state highway extending for all but ten miles of the distance. All returned home enthusiastic over Pierpont Inn, Ventura and Arlington Hotel, Santa Barbara, and declare that a more enjoyable anniversary celebration could hardly have been arranged.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Rev. W. E. Edmonds preached Sunday morning to a large congregation upon the topic, "A Bill of Exceptions," based upon the well known text of John 3:3, "Except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God." This has truly been called the most wonderful chapter in the Bible and its wonderful verse is the 16th, "For God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him shall have eternal life." Here is an epitome of the whole plan of salvation and over this verse have great controversies been waged; but in the text first quoted is found the whole doctrine of Regeneration.

It is not for us a question of interpretation but of application; it is the word of God and from it there can be no appeal. It must be believed because Christ said it, not because we understand it. Life is full of those things that we believe but do not understand. This word "except" is the very hinge of the Door of Salvation. Conversion means a change of mind, but regeneration is much more than this, it is a change of life, it is God's work in the heart of a man. It is not righteousness that avails us, we must be regenerated, become partakers in the righteousness of Christ. Another exception must be noted in this connection; also a vital one, "Except ye repent," and this is another key to salvation. Repentence is more than mere sorrow or regret for sin, it is a feeling that comes from the depths of the heart. God does not force men to come to Him—this also we may not understand, you must yield your life to Christ before understanding comes. You can come anyway you please, but, come! It may be through sorrow and suffering that you come; remember the words of Jesus in the garden, "Except I drink of this cup," or those of Paul, "I die daily." We must die daily to self; do not come to the altar alone, bring with you another soul, not being content to merely have saved your own.

AN ANIMAL OF THE PAST

Buffalo were more numerous than any other large mammal of historical times, and once ranged over one to two thirds of North America, from Pennsylvania to Mexico and to Great Slave lake and the land of the musk ox, about 2000 miles east and west by over 3000 north and south. Centering in his natural home, the billowy great plains, he also lived on the plains of northern Mexico, the Great American desert, up into the Rocky mountains to an elevation of 11,000 feet, and even nearly to tidewater east of the Appalachian mountains. At one time a man could drive for 25 miles through an unbroken herd. They even obstructed steamboats and derailed railroad trains.

He was almost completely exterminated in his natural range. Not more than 1000 remain, these being chiefly in Yellowstone national park and the Great Slave lake region, in which latter place there are about 600 of a variety known as the wood buffalo. In 1870 they ranged from Texas to Great Slave lake. In 1890 they were to be found only in parks and the Great Slave lake region.

There are now slightly over 1500 in captivity, which are increasing slowly. Considering these immense herds, and how few there are left, he may be considered an animal of the past.—From the Official Handbook of Rocky Mountain Park Museum.

WAR MONEY NOT WANTED

Two men were on a train west of Davenport, Iowa, one a horse buyer and the other an Iowa farmer. Said the horse buyer to the farmer: "Mr. ——, you're the man I'm on my way to see. I understand you have a bunch of horses for sale. If they will measure up to army requirements I will pay you the biggest price you ever heard of." The farmer waited a moment before replying and said, "Jake, if I didn't love horses I wouldn't raise them. My wife's of the same opinion. We can't use that kind of money at our house."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

SPEED AND ENDURANCE OF DOGS

Few people realize of what remarkable speed dogs are capable. Some statistics in regard to this have been gathered by M. Dusolier, a French scientist. After pointing out the marvelous endurance shown by little fox terriers who follow their masters patiently for hours, while the latter are riding on bicycles or in carriages, he says that even greater endurance is shown by certain wild animals that are akin to dogs. Thus, the wolf can run between fifty and sixty miles in one night; and an Arctic fox can do quite as well if not better.

Eskimo and Siberian dogs can travel forty-five miles on the ice in five hours, and there is a case on record in which a team of Eskimo dogs traveled six and a half miles in twenty-eight minutes. According to M. Dusolier, the speed of the shepherd dogs and those used on hunting ranges is from ten to fifteen yards a second. English setters and pointers hunt at the rate of eighteen to nineteen miles an hour, and they can maintain this speed for at least two hours. Foxhounds are extraordinarily swift, as is proved by the fact that a dog of this breed once beat a thoroughbred horse, covering four miles in six and a half minutes, which was at the rate of nearly eighteen yards a second. Greyhounds are the swiftest of all four-footed creatures, and their speed may be regarded as equal to that of carrier pigeons. English greyhounds, which are used for coursing, are able to cover, at full gallop, a space between eighteen eighteen and twenty-three yards every second.

MISSED HIS DAILY PAPER

A dog belonging to Robert Robinson died in Port Royal, Pennsylvania, recently, after being a faithful servant for twelve years.

The Times of that place tells us that for about five years it went regularly every day to the railroad that passes through the farm, got the North American which the mail clerk threw from the train and carried it to the house. "Cur," as he was familiarly known, seemed to take great pride in the discharge of this duty and when the mail clerk was taken off and the rural delivery inaugurated, it was with reluctance that he accepted the ruling, and every day after the train had passed he would go to the railroad crossing and vainly search for the paper that was not there.

COLLIE SAVES TERRIER'S LIFE

A true story comes from Hudson, Illinois, from A. N. Starkey, living on a farm near that village. He owns a collie and a rat terrier. The latter disappeared and after being searched for was given up for dead. The collie, however, acted strangely. Immediately after being given food he disappeared and did not return again until the next meal time. Members of the family decided to follow him. They did so, and a half mile from the house the poor little rat terrier was found, caught in a trap which had been set for mink. The collie had been carrying food in his mouth to his little friend for over a week and was overjoyed to think help had come to the rat terrier. The latter was very soon released and tenderly carried home to be given proper care. The devotion of the collie was much remarked in that neighborhood.

THE BIRDS' TIME TABLE

When we consider the great distances some birds travel and the dangers they encounter by the way, it is remarkable that they usally arrive on time.

That the daily trips to and from the roost should be made regularly is not surprising. The birds have only a short way to go, and they leave soon after daybreak and return just before dark. But when, year after year, the bobolink, the Baltimore oriole, midget humming bird, many warblers and other birds arrive from journeys thousands of miles in length on exactly or nearly the same day, we ask how they can possibly be so prompt.

In order to answer this question we must know something about the birds' timetable. Anyone who has studied the birds about his home for many years can make a time table giving the dates of arrival and depart of all the migratory birds which visit him.

In this time table we shall notice that the early birds—those which come in March—are much less prompt than the later ones—those which come in May. This is because the weather of March is so much more uncertain than that of May. In some years, near New York City, snow covers the ground and the ponds are frozen almost until April. In other words, the snow melts and the ice disappears before the middle of March. But by May 1 the weather is more settled. The first week in May of one year is much like the first week in May of another year.

So it follows that the exact time of the arrival of the birds is more or less dependable on the weather. It is not the weather which induces them to come. What can the Baltimore oriole in Central America know about the weather near New York City? Not a thing. He leaves Central America without regard to the weather there or any other place. But his journey may be delayed by bad weather or hastened by favorable weather If, therefore, he finds the weather of one year much like that of another year he is apt to reach the same place at about the same time year after year.—Frank M. Chapman in the March St. Nicholas.

FRENCH DOGS AS SENTINELS

The following picturesque account appears in a recent issue of Figaro, Paris, of one of the dogs used by the French for sentry purposes:

A small post has been established at a sharp turning. It is spoken of as the Dog Post, as dogs mount guard there. The animal on duty is called Portos. He is of medium size, curly haired, with long silky ears and great gray eyes, with a red tongue that as it hangs out looks like a slice of ham. Every night a soldier brings him to his post, a sort of rock well hidden, out of the marl. When night comes Portos sits by the side of the two sentinels and watches. Wild and excitable when off duty he is just as serious and attentive when on guard. It is no good trying to pat him. Nothing can distract his attention, and he seems to know the part he is playing in the quadruple entente.

DEAD CHICKENS FOR EASTER

There cannot be anything more at variance with the spirit of what it is meant to symbolize or celebrate than the little, real, dead and stuffed downy chickens put in the collections of Easter novelties. Many thousands must have been produced in incubators to supply this horrible demand. Then the soft, chirp little things are pinched to death by two strong finfers compressing the lungs and "taxidermed" for the trade. "Christ is Risen" commemorated by cruelly slaying the creature born from an egg, long the symbol of the resurrection among eastern peoples. The idea is so grotesquely contradictory that an instant's thought would make any one pass these little victims by in choosing a friend's gift.

The Lure of Spring.

Lo, Spring is coming! how the cattle sniff
The balmy air!
List the impatient stamping of their feet,
The mute despair
With which they watch the close shut stable door
That bars them in;
Voicing their disapproval by low moo
And gentle whin.

Then note the robin's jubilant refrain,
The bluebird's call;
The blackbird's whistle from the marshes, and
Above them all,
The song sparrow a-quiver with the joy
That thrills it when
It hears spring's rustling garments trailing through
The field and glen.

'Tis not humanity alone sends forth
Its notes of praise
For unlocked streams, for fields in verdure clad,
For length'ning days;
From stanchioned stalls hoofbeats demand release;
For nature's thrall
That lures to field and wood and limpid stream,
Is felt by all.

THE CORINTH CANAL

One of the most curious canals in the world is that which connects the Gulf of Corinth with the Gulf of Aegina. This is not only the stranghtest canal in the world, it is also one dreaded by sailors. It is an add fact that this canal was first thought possible more than twenty-five centuries ago, by that old historical hero, Periander, and yet the canal was not actually commenced until 1884. It took nine years of hard work to complete it, and when, in 1893, the canal was opened, it was found that air currents there were such that it was dangerous for vessels to pass through.

The banks of this canal are perfectly straight, and in some places rise to a height of more than two hundred feet. Because the canal has no turns in it, the breeze sweeps through at a fearful rate, causing dangerous tidal currents.

The average depth of the canal is twenty-six feet and its width about eighty feet. All these facts help make this the air shaft that it is. Just why the canal was made so narrow is hard to say, but the result is that two deep-sea sailing vessels cannot pass each other, and one vessel must wait until the other has gone through. Because of this, many delays in shipping occur.—Willis P. Knight, in Wellspring.

MINOR STRAINS

I wonder if the birds have memories,
In pause of spring's gay symphony, just now,
A plaintive message trembled through the trees,
Soft as a dream of some remembered bough.

AN EASTER VISION

An Easter vision dawned upon my view
Ere yet the swelling buds were green of hue.
Ere yet the grass responded to the lure
Of coaxing sunbeams, did my eyes conjure
A spot where dumb things might their praises raise
In thankfulness that life held pleasant ways.
All nature bursting into bloom attests
The bounty the Creator manifests
And gives so freely. Why should humans be Alone, partakers of this royalty?

My vision led me to a stable where
The cattle reveled in the balmy air
Through open doors,—where green things lured the eye
And lent their never-failing prophecy.
The secret Nature guards with jealous care
Is shared by all,—beasts, birds that wing the air,
With humans feel the re-awakening
That touches all at the approach of Spring.

ELECTRICITY FOR SHIPS

The introduction of the electric drive on some of the latest boats marks a new epoch in steamship construction. For a hundred years after the building of the Clermont only one method known of driving a ship by steam was known—to attach the steam engine directly to the propeller. In the new type the engine drives an electric generator, which in turn drives the propeller.

The utilization of electricity was made possible by the invention of turbine, a form of steam engine that made its first appearance about twenty years ago. In its simplest form it consists of a shaft, carrying a number of vanes that are spun around inside a casing by the action of the steam. These have gradually supplanted the giant reciprocating engines for land use because they are simpler, take less space and use less coal to develop the same amount of power.

The turbines had to be adapted to ship use by much ingenuity. They could not be "reversed," as the reciprocating engines are. So by using turbines to make electric power, and using the latter for regular electric motors, the problem has been solved.

PROVED IN THE WRONG

Though theoretically we are all ready to acknowledge ourselves liable to mistakes, we dislike to admit ourselves mistaken in any especial instance. And if some interfering individual comes along and marshals an offensive array of facts to show that we are entirely wrong on some matter regarding which we had expressed ourselves, it is difficult for us to keep from feeling resentful.

At the same time if we are in the wrong, it is a good thing to know it. The person who shows us our mistakes deserves the same gratitude that the dentist does. He may hurt and he may make us excessively uncomfortable, but we cannot turn our backs on him without injury to ourselves. The person who is never proved in the wrong, is not likely to be in the right.

REMOVING WAX STAINS

To remove wax, or tallow stains, lay a piece of brown paper over them and apply a hot flatiron. After one or two applications the paper will absorb every bit of the wax or tallow from the cloth, leaving no trace behind.

TO CLEAN A WRINGER

Kerosene oil is excellent for cleaning the rubber rollers of a clothes wringer. After it has been applied the rollers should be rinsed off with warm water.

THE SUN AND THE WIND

One day the sun and the wind had a quarrel. The wind said, "I am stronger than you." "No," said the sun, "I am stronger than you."

While they were disputing they saw a traveler coming along the road. He wore a heavy coat.

"See that man!" cried the wind. "Let us see which of us can take off his coat. The one who can do that is the stronger."

"Agreed," said the sun. "You may begin."

The wind blew and blew and blew. But the traveler only drew his coat closer about him.

The wind now blew more fiercely than before. The trees rocked, and the dust flew, but the traveler only buttoned up his coat.

"What a gale this is!" cried he, and turned up his coat collar to his ears.

"I give it up," said the wind.

Then the sun had his turn. He shone and shone and shone.

"How the weather has changed," said the traveler, and he unbuttoned his coat.

Still the sun shone, and presently the traveler wiped the moisture from his face.

"This thick coat is too much for me; I will have to take it off and carry it on my arm," said he, and he took it off.

"You have won," said the wind. "I see now that gentleness succeeds where rudeness fails."—From "A Child's Book of Stories," selected and arranged by Penrhyn W. Coussens.

MISSIONARY CONFERENCE

Dr. Robert H. Glover of New York city, foreign secretary of the C. & M. A., who recently returned from a tour of the orient, and Dr. Charles Blanchard of Wheaton, Ill., the Rev. G. N. Eldridge of Los Angeles, Cal., and the Rev. George W. Davis of Los Angeles, Cal., will be the speakers at a Bible and Missionary Conference, to be held in the Alliance chapel, corner of Louise and Chestnut tsreets, Glendale, beginning Saturday evening, April 8, and closing Tuesday evening, April 11.

FIRST M. E. MISSIONARY CONVENTION

The Woman's Home Missionary society of the First Methodist Episcopal church, met at the church Thursday afternoon in regular session. Mrs. Spickerman, president of the society, presided. Two chapters of the Missionary Story book were reviewed. It was announced that the May meeting would be held at the home of Mrs. B. D. Snudden, 123 Jackson street, when the mite boxes would be opened. There was a large attendance on Thursday.

TO CLEAN CALF BOOK BINDINGS

Wash the bindings lightly with a soft sponge dipped in a mixture of a half ounce of the best glue dissolved in one pint of warm water, one teaspoonful of glycerine and a little flour paste. When dry, rub well with a chamois skin.

A SURE CURE FOR INK STAINS

To remove ink stains from wash materials pour a tablespoonful of kerosene on them and rub well. Then rinse in kerosene and the spots will disappear as if by magic. This should be done before the regular washing.

NUMBERING DRESS PATTERNS

In opening a dress-pattern, writing the number of the pattern on each separate piece of tissue-paper will save much time and trouble in identifying stray pieces when replacing them in their proper envelope.

TO RESTORE COLORS

Ammonia will often restore colors that have been faded by acids.

The aviator's wife was taking her first trip with her husband in his airship.

"Wait a minute, George," she said. "I'm afraid we will have to go down again."

"What's wrong?" asked the husband.

"I believe I have dropped one of the pearl buttons off my jacket. I think I can see it glistening on the ground."

"Keep your seat, my dear," said the aviator. "That's Lake Erie."—Western Christian Union.

No men who beat horses deserve the title of "horsemen." It will always be found that those who do so are either ignorant, stupid men or are cruel by nature. Such men should have nothing to do with horses.

A sure sign of spring in the middle United States is something like this, from the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal:

I made a garden once or twice,
In days of yore.
Will these experiences suffice?
Well, I dunno. It's kind of nice.
I may against my wife's advice
Start in once more.

But it would, we think, be better if the poet had put it this way:

I made a garden years ago,
And did my best
With spade and shovel, rake and hoe
And things the seedsman said would grow—
My wife will have no encore—no,
She did the rest.—C. S. Monitor.

First Soldier (in the trenches): I was really intended for the church. In fact, I was on the point of being ordained last August.

He: Do you believe in preparedness?

She: Well, I wouldn't mind being in arms.—Jester.
